A password is like underwear . . .

Don't share it with others. Change it often. Don't leave it lying around. Be mysterious: * * * * * *

A password provides access to warehouses of information, both personal and Brown’s, which you have been authorized to view.

You are responsible for its proper use, which includes not sharing it with others.

Read about the risks of—and alternatives to—sharing at www.brown.edu/passwordsharing this message brought to you by The Information Security Group :: ISG@brown.edu

providing proactive security expertise: engineering robust security architecture: enhancing a culture of security awareness